

Wonder Women

Wonder Women can save the world in more than one way. In addition to saving the planet from super villains, they can also help save the environment from the imminent threat of climate change. Like them, the DC Comics superhero Wonder Woman is more than just a superstar in movies and comic books. She represents the power and strength of women around the world. Today, and every day, we are thankful for all of the women in our lives that have shaped us individually and globally, and who work to make the world a better place.

We want to thank women who, like Wonder Woman, believe in the inherent good of humankind and refuse to sit on the sidelines. They remind us how to sustain ourselves and our environment. From Mayor Bowser's commitment to carbon neutrality to our local league of DC EcoWomen, women are at the forefront of the environmental movement. Protecting the planet means making it safer and greener for everyone.

FOR 2019: IN WASHINGTON

THURSDAY, APRIL 04 | FRIDAY, APRIL 05

Ideas have spread, movements created, leaders elected, and new policies established because of the power — and impact — of storytelling. As our planet faces new challenges, storytellers who create awareness and inspire change are needed now more than ever.

At the 2019 Planet Forward Summit on April 4-5, learn from some of the best communicators, photographers, innovators, policymakers, and journalists in the world. Discover what “impact” really means for communicators and creatives alike, and network with influential people and organizations in sustainability and science.

Our very own “Waste Diva” Danielle Nkojo will join the conversation as she discusses how she uses her super powers to help build communities and measure success.

Find your voice. Be a storyteller. Help move the planet forward. Register now to reserve your spot.
